Course boosts drivers skills

By Steven Candia

“I thought I was an expert driver until the training. But now I understand the traffic rules.” This was an open confession of an excited driver of a senior Police officer. The man who preferred anonymity, seemingly overwhelmed by the certificate he acquired after training, kept on glancing at it before trotting off to join his colleagues and senior police officers for a group photograph.

“All I can tell you is that I am a driver of a director in the Police Force,” were the last words he uttered as he trotted on.

He was among three others in the office of the acting commissioner of Police in-charge of human resource development, Frederick Yiga, to receive certificates for successfully completing the course.

The officers underwent a one-day training course in defensive and off-road driving at Kajjansi Airstrip.

The course was supervised by Mick Farmer the training director, On Course Uganda Ltd., a firm specialised in offering driving courses designed for African roads.
